ABSTRACT

The bibliography presents approximately 100 references (1961-75) on planning programs and activities for infants and toddlers. Although many of the documents relate to normal children, the activities are equally applicable to children with handicaps. Entries are arranged alphabetically by author within the following categories: curriculum and activities, information on resources for administrators (including staff training and program standards), materials and information for parents, and training films. Each reference usually contains author's name, title, date, brief summary, price and availability information. (CL)

In 1968 the enactment of the Handicapped Children's Early Education Act authorized the establishment and operation of model early education projects. These 150 projects are collectively referred to as the First Chance Network. The responsibility for administering this new program was accepted by the Bureau of Education for the Handicapped, Office of Education. The projects are designed to develop and demonstrate effective approaches in assisting handicapped children during their early years and are structured so that other communities can replicate, or adopt, exemplary components of the projects to meet their own needs in similar projects.

The Bureau of Education for the Handicapped has as its overall goal the equalization of educational opportunity for handicapped children by providing the leadership and resources needed to help the handicapped achieve their fullest potential and participate constructively in society to their maximum abilities. The long-range objective of the Handicapped Children's Early Education Program is to stimulate services to all of the estimated 1,000,000 preschool-aged handicapped children by 1980.

The Technical Assistance Development System (TADS) was established in Chapel Hill, N.C. by BEH to provide a wide array of special support services for the Network of centers. Services most often are offered to First Chance projects in the areas of program planning and evaluation, intervention programs, outreach and replication, and media and information.

TADS is a division of the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center at The University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

This Tadscript is distributed pursuant to a grant from the Office of Education, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Grantees undertaking such projects under government sponsorship are encouraged to express freely their judgment in professional and technical matters. Points of view or opinions do not, therefore, necessarily represent official Office of Education position or policy.

INTRODUCTION

Planning Programs and Activities for Infants and Toddlers, A Bibliography was compiled to provide administrators, program planners and teachers with a list of practical references and resources. Research papers and reports for the most part have not been listed because knowledge advances in infant education have become so rapid that the Bibliography would upon publication be out of date. Sources containing a survey of research information, however, have been included.

A large number of entries relate to the "normal" infant. They contain standards, practices, and activities, however, which are as appropriate for the child with a handicap as for the non-handicapped child.

The entries in the Bibliography have been organized by topic. In some cases, references have been listed in more than one topic section because they refer to books, articles, or material which would be of interest or use to people interested in different topics. The sections of the Bibliography were chosen because of the numerous requests TADS receives for information in the following areas:

CURRICULUM AND ACTIVITIES (both commercial and project-developed)

INFORMATION ON RESOURCES FOR ADMINISTRATORS OF INFANT-TODDLER PROGRAMS (staff training, staffing patterns, plans for utilization of physical space, program standards, and other administrative concerns)

MATERIALS AND INFORMATION FOR PARENTS

TRAINING FILMS (films which can be used for staff and parent training; those useful for parent groups are indicated)
